Log-book entries.—(a) Applicable to foreign voyages by sea (the Great Lakes excepted).

The master of any passenger vessel making foreign voyages by sea shall insert at the time of departing from port in the vessel's official log a statement of the position of the subdivision load-line mark, port and starboard, in relation to the surface of the water in which the vessel is then floating,[1] and shall also enter a statement of the actual drafts of the vessel forward and aft as nearly as the same can be ascertained.[2]

There shall be entered in the official log the time that hinged, watertight doors fitted in bulkheads dividing cargo between deck spaces are opened in port and the time these doors are closed before leaving port. (These doors must be closed, secured, and remain so during the voyage.)

There shall be entered in the official log the time of opening and the time of closing in port, portable plates, gangways, cargo ports, coaling ports, and other openings in the vessel's hull below the margin line which are required by the regulations to be kept closed at sea (46 C. (If it becomes essential for the safety of the ship to open any of these fittings at sea, the circumstances and the time of opening and closing shall be entered in the official log.)

There shall be entered in the official log the time of opening, closing, and securing, at sea, watertight doors fitted between bunkers for the purpose of trimming coal.

There shall be entered in the official log the time of opening and closing in port those airports below the bulkhead deck that are specifically required to be kept closed while at sea by the regulations.

There shall be entered in the official log a record of the following drills and inspections with an explicit record of any defects which may be disclosed and the steps taken to remedy them:

(1) Operation of watertight power doors and watertight hinged doors in main transverse bulkheads in use at sea—daily.

(2) Drills in the operation of watertight doors, airports, valves, and closing mechanisms of scuppers, ash chutes, and rubbish chutes—weekly. (When the voyage exceeds one week, a complete drill shall be held before leaving port.)

(3) Inspection at sea of all watertight doors together with all mechanisms and indicators connected therewith, all valves the closing of which is necessary to make a compartment watertight—at least once a week.

[1] When the draft of the vessel is limited by a seasonal load line located below the subdivision load line the position of the seasonal load line shall be entered in relation to the surface of the water in which the vessel is floating.

[2] When an allowance of draft is made for density of the water in which the vessel is floating, this density is to be noted in the official log.
